RE: Request to Extend Temporary Protected Status for Haiti

Dear Secretary Kelly:

On behalf of the 168 undersigned national, state, and local faith-based organizations, as well as 248 faith leaders from across traditions, we respectfully request that you extend Temporary Protected Status (TPS) for Haitians for 18 months as dangerous conditions continue to persist in Haiti, posing a serious risk to the health and safety of Haitian TPS holders if they were to be returned to the country. To allow TPS for Haiti to expire would mean turning our backs on the vulnerable Haitians whom we pledged to welcome, and would place considerable burdens on the country as it struggles to recover from multiple natural disasters. TPS was created to provide protection to those in the United States when it is unsafe for their return home - precisely the conditions Haiti faces today.

Extending Haitian TPS is in the national interest, as Haitian TPS holders are a self-sufficient and industrious segment of the U.S. economy and are providing invaluable economic support to family members still in Haiti, preventing further destabilization of the country. Allowing Haitian TPS holders to remain safely in the U.S. until Haiti is sufficiently stable honors our closely-held moral, religious, and American values to stand for the human rights and dignity of all people, here and abroad. TPS should be extended. To do otherwise would be inconsistent with our values of hospitality, generosity, and compassion.

Food insecurity, disease, and instability persist in Haiti

The Haitian people have faced a series of cataclysmic events. TPS was first granted to eligible Haitians in the U.S. in 2010, following a 7.0 magnitude earthquake which displaced 1.5 million people and caused catastrophic damage to the country’s infrastructure. 300,000 buildings were leveled in Port-au-Prince alone. 60,000 people are still homeless as a result of the earthquake and living in camps seven years later. United Nations humanitarian efforts following the earthquake introduced cholera – now...

the worst cholera epidemic in the world – killing at least 9,200 people and sickening nearly 100,000 others to date.⁵ Thousands of people continue to be sickened by the disease every year⁶, which leads to severe dehydration, blood sugar shock, and organ failure and can kill a person in a matter of hours.⁷

Hurricane Matthew struck Haiti in October 2016, which devastated the country and impeded Haiti’s recovery. The category 4 hurricane impacted two million people and resulted in $2.7 billion in damage, approximately 32 percent of Haiti’s GDP.⁸ Tens of thousands of homes and schools were destroyed, as well as agricultural crops and livestock, exacerbating widespread hunger, political and economic instability, and the waterborne cholera epidemic. The storm surge and widespread flooding has left 1.25 million Haitians, including 800,000 children, without access to safe drinking water.⁹ More than 800,000 Haitians were left in dire need of immediate food assistance as a result of the hurricane’s destruction.¹⁰

The events of the past seven years in Haiti are unprecedented and the country remains unstable despite substantial efforts and progress made by the Haitian people and international community. Although poverty has plagued Haiti for generations, the temporary and extreme conditions in the country are a direct result of multiple environmental disasters and “the worst cholera outbreak in recent history,” as reported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.¹¹ The country needs more time to recover before Haitian nationals in the U.S. can safely return.

Extending Haitian TPS until the country is stable is in the U.S. national interest

There are approximately 50,000 Haitian TPS holders living in the U.S., peacefully raising families, and participating in the economy. Haitian TPS holders contribute $280 million to the U.S. GDP and $42 million to Social Security and to Medicare each year.¹²

Haitian TPS holders are also making substantial contributions to keeping Haiti as stable as possible as the country rebuilds. According to a February 2016 report, remittances to Haiti exceeded $2 billion - or 22.7 percent of Haiti’s GDP in 2015; $1.3 billion coming from the U.S. Removing this vital lifeline would likely result in an increase in asylum seekers from Haiti, already on the upswing.

Ending TPS while the country is so unsafe would cost American taxpayers, as it is likely the U.S. will be forced to resort to deporting many TPS holders to remove them from the country, at a cost of $10,070 per person. Terminating TPS would also result in a loss of $2.8 billion in GDP and $428 million in Social Security and Medicare contributions over a decade. Finally, Haiti’s current country conditions would force Haitian parents with U.S. citizen children to make the impossible decision to leave their children behind, ripping apart families and needlessly scarring a generation of Haitian Americans.

Our collective moral, religious, and American values call for extending Haitian TPS

Extending TPS for Haitians is a compassionate, just, and pragmatic choice for both Americans and Haitians. Giving Haiti more time to rebuild and recover from the extraordinary events of the past seven years will protect the lives of vulnerable people and mitigate strains on the U.S. economy and immigration system. DHS should be responding to this humanitarian crisis by upholding our promises to the Haitian people and by allowing Haitians to seek safety here in the United States. As members of faith-based organizations across the country, we urge you to join us in standing shoulder-to-shoulder with our Haitian brothers and sisters in need.

Sincerely,

Faith-based Organizations
