100% Fanm

100% Fanm [SAN POU SAN FANM] is a feminist, non-profit organization in Haiti dedicated to advancing women's rights and gender justice through a Black, decolonial feminist lens. Its work centers on social, economic, and climate justice, fair education, and reproductive autonomy, while also promoting advocacy, political education, research, and solidarity with feminist movements locally and internationally. Founded in 2010 and has since grown into a structured network led by feminists, with a governance board and executive committee guiding strategy and operations. It focuses much of its work in remote communities, where it supports women's collectives and associations, including programs for women farmers, community center projects, and disaster response teams, all while emphasizing transparency, accountability, and long-term partnership.

Bureau des Avocats Internationaux (BAI)

Founded in 1995, the BAI is Haiti's largest and oldest public interest law firm. It works in collaboration with its U.S.-based solidarity partner, the Institute for Justice and Democracy in Haiti (IJDH), to advocate, litigate, build constituencies, and nurture networks to create systemic pathways to justice for marginalized Haitians and to hold international human rights violators accountable. The BAI and IJDH have helped victims prosecute human rights cases, defended activists, trained Haitian lawyers, educated and mobilized Haitian communities, rallied global allies, impelled the Haitian justice system to respond to survivors of gender-based violence, and advocated on issues relating to justice and human rights. Of particular note, the BAI's Rape Accountability and Prevention Project (RAPP) has been providing comprehensive legal representation for GBV survivors since 2010. The BAI also secured convictions of top 1991-1994 dictatorship leaders and won $400,000 in compensation for victims through spearheading the prosecution of the Raboteau Massacre in 2000, the most complex litigation ever handled by Haitian courts.
